

Wine List 2015/2016

“Red wine with red meat, white wine with fish” or “drink whatever wine you like with whatever you want to eat, there are no wrong combinations”...which one is the right guide?

Rules provide guidelines to steer us towards more successful combinations and spontaneity allows us to test them, maybe break them or find new ones that work. Food and wine matches are all about finding a balance. At Heritage Portfolio, we are as passionate about wine as we are about food. We put all our passion and knowledge into providing you with the best possible experience of both. We work closely with selected producers and have painstakingly handpicked them based on their lovely products.

Familia Zuccardi, Argentina

Alberto Zuccardi founded the winery in 1963, challenging the tradition. He sought to introduce Argentinian wine to the world stage, and it is this spirit that still drives the family. Today, a combination of three generations works together, to create their unique wines.

Iona Wines, South Africa

Iona's vineyards are located in the Highlands, a unique sub-region of Elgin. How appropriate for Scotland! The climate and soil provide an utterly stunning Sauvignon Blanc. Andrew Gunn began his wine life in early 1997 and has enjoyed one success after another.

Nyetimber Estate, England

With the same chalk soil as the northern French region and a similar climate, the classic Champagne varieties thrived in their West Sussex vineyard sites. This is the only producer to make superb quality sparkling wine from estate grown fruit. For them it is all about quality, quality and then again quality.

Eberle Winery, USA

Gary Eberle began his career in the wine industry in 1973, and he co-founded Paso Robles as an Appellation in 1980. Named after its local oak trees, Paso Robles is one of the most up and coming wine regions in California. They have risen to fame with wines that deliver exceptional quality combining the best of the Old and New world!

Alliance Wine, Scotland

Alliance Wines produce their own range of exciting and original wines from around the world using their experience in countries that they are deeply passionate about. They work hand in hand with local experts. By working with people who “live and breathe” their region, they are able to build upon that experience and bring fresh life with new perspectives.
